“It’s understood in cities that swimming pools are not profitable so they’re going to be subsidized,” city manager I. Corbett said. “I do as managers to continue to decrease the subsidy they require.”

The town built its full aquatic center on top of its 1960s-era public pool in 1998. The hope was to have a lot of amenities for a wide range of people.

The quickly expanding Hermiston followed suit in 2004, building an aquatic center with a competitive pool, swirly slide, leisure pool and more.
